

HERRESHOFF IN DEFEAT

Quest for Golf Title of Great Britain a Quick Failure.

London, June 4.—A combination of bad play and ill luck completely upset Freddie Herreshoff's chances of winning the amateur golf championship of Great Britain at Westward Ho to-day. The American was put out of the contest in his first match, D. A. M. Brown, the Isle of Wight Herreshoff, who hoped to win the title, appeared nervous and was completely out of his element. He got in the ditch at the first hole, and at the turn was down. At the thirteenth hole, where Brown was in a hole, Herreshoff sliced and dug into the ditch, but at the twelfth hole was only a few feet down. At the thirteenth, however, Brown was bunkered, and again Brown was able to halve the next three.

When Fred Herreshoff, who was runner up to Harold H. Hilton in the national championship tournament at Apawamis last September, sailed for the other side early in April to compete in the British amateur tournament, he was considered to have better than an outside chance of ...omplishing something worth while. I fact, a few of his friends had visions of the far-driving Herreshoff duplicating the performance of Walter J. Travis, who won the English title at Sandwich in 1904.

Herreshoff has never been a consistent golfer, and while he has at different times
shown brilliancy, he has at others failed
even to make the mark of sixteen in an ordinary tournament. When he is at his best he is a difficult man to beat, as Hilton can testify. Evidently yesterday was not one of Fred's good days.

LITTLE CATCHES A TARTAR

Dionne Gives Star a Tussle at Lawn Tennis at Englewood.

It is the steady driving wildness of the lawn tennis racket which strikes terror to the heart of Raymond D. Little. The shareholder in the national doubles team again had a narrow escape yesterday at the courts of the Englewood Club, a suburb of Englewood, N. J., where G. A. L. Dionne forced him to the limit of three sets before Little won at 6-2, 4-6, 6-3. Two weeks ago Joseph C. Condon put Little through the same grilling at the West Side Club.

Edwin P. Larned appeared in the singles winning two contests. In the first he easily disposed of C. T. Edgerton at 6-3, 6-0, 6-0. In the second he was 6-0, 6-0, 6-0.
